SOLEMN SERVICES.

Nation's Tribute to Its Martyred Chief Executive.

LAST RITES AT WASHINGTON.

Mrs. McKinley Unable to Attend Obsequies in the Capitol.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND PRESENT.

President Roosevelt a Conspicuous Figure in the Ceremonies—Impressive Funeral Pageant From White House to the Federal Building. Thousands Look Upon the Features of the Honored Dead for Last Time.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The state funeral day of the late President McKinley opened as somber as the occasion. The sky was overcast with dark, slow moving gray clouds, occasional patters of rain fell, giving way for momentary intervals to gleams of dull sunshine, and a soft wind barely stirred into relief the signs of mourning on building fronts that told as well as the subdued air of the public that it was a day of sorrow.

A portion of the many beautiful floral tributes sent to the White House were placed about the funeral casket. Conspicuous among them was a massive cushion floral tribute in the form of an army badge from the G. A. R. and offerings from the Loyal Legion and other soldier organizations. Other tributes came from Mrs. James A. Garfield, widow of another martyred president, Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, Secretaries Hay and Hitchcock, General and Mrs. Miles, Ambassador Porter at Paris, the Argentine, Guatemalan, Costa Rican and other legations and the municipality of Havana, commissioners of Porto Rico and many others.

Thursday, that which was mortal of William McKinley will be committed to earth at Canton with ceremonies as personal as the national character and interest in its executive will permit. Today was the occasion when the nation was to pay its last tribute of respect and admiration at the bier of the dead president. All the country had sent representatives to testify that the dead held his place deep in the nation's heart. Other nations ordered their diplomatic and military representatives to be present as a token that they mourned with America in its loss. Ex-President Cleveland was here to take part in the ceremonies and like President Roosevelt, paid his tribute first in private at the part under orders directing them to participate in the services of honor to their late commander-in-chief. The south sent General Longstreet and other leaders of the Confederacy.

At precisely 9 o'clock, a silent command was given and the body-bearers silently and reverently raised to their stalwart shoulders the casket containing the relics of the illustrious dead. They walked with slow step and as they appeared in the main door of the White House the Marine band, stationed on the avenue opposite the mansion, struck up the favorite hymn of the dead president, "Nearer My God to Thee."

There was perfect silence throughout the big mansion and as the last strain of music died away those in the building lifted their heads, but their eyes were wet.

The second stage of the late president's journey toward the waiting grave at Canton was begun a few minutes after 9 o'clock. As early as an hour previously officers of the government, civil, military and judicial, began to arrive and many others whose names are familiar the world over came singly and in groups to pay their tribute. Several members of the diplomatic corps in court costume were among the early comers. Former President Cleveland and former Secretary of War Lamont arrived about 8:30 and were shown at once to seats in the red parlor. Members of the cabinet began to arrive soon after and were immediately followed by members of the senate committee and the members of the United States supreme court, headed by Chief Justice Fuller in the robes of office.

President Roosevelt arrived at 8:50 o'clock, accompanied by his wife and his sister and went immediately to the blue parlor, where they were joined by members of the cabinet. The president wore a frock coat with a band of crepe on the left arm.

Mrs. McKinley arose earlier than usual to prepare for the ordeal. She had rested quite well during the night, but her pale face told plainly of her night of sorrow.

Senator Hanna reached the White House only a short time before the procession was to move. While the men of note were arriving at the White House the funeral escort under command of Major General John R. Brooke was forming immediately in front of the White House. Besides regular soldiers, sailors and marines, the escort was made up of a detachment of the national guard, members of the G. A. R., Loyal Legion and kindred bodies and civic organizations and representatives of all branches of the national government and governors of states and their staffs. The public had been astir early and the streets were crowded with people. Wire cables strung along the entire route of march from the White House to the capitol kept it clear for the funeral procession.

As the hearse moved away the mourners from the White House entered carriages and followed the body to the capitol, where the funeral services were held.

Mrs. McKinley Unable to Attend. It was thought early in the morning that Mrs. McKinley might feel strong enough to attend the services there, but it was finally decided that it would be imprudent to tax her vitality more than was absolutely necessary and so she concluded to remain in her room under the immediate care of Dr. Rixey, Mrs. Barber, her sister and her niece, Miss Barber.

Slowly down the White House driveway through a drizzling rain, the solemn cortege wound its way to the gate leading to the avenue and halted. Then with a grand, solemn swing, the artillery band began the "Dead March From Saul," a bugle blast to "march" and the head of the procession was moving on its way to the capitol. The casket in a black covered hearse and drawn by six coal black horses, caparisoned in black net with trailing tassels, and a stalwart groom at the head of each, moved down through the gateway and came to a stand alongside of the moving procession.

Major General John R. Brooke, mounted, was at the head of the line. Behind him came his aides, the artillery band, a squadron of cavalry with red and white guidons, a battery of field artillery, a company of engineers, two battalions of coast artillery and a detachment of the hospital corps. Then came the naval contingent of the first section, headed by the marine band, followed by a battalion of marines and one of sailors from the North Atlantic squadron, very picturesque and strong. At the national guard of the department of Columbia brought up the rear of the first section of the parade, the civic section of the procession marched into line. It was under command of General Henry V. Boynton, as chief marshal and comprised detachments from the military order of the Loyal Legion, the Army and Navy union, the Union Veterans' Legion, the Spanish war veterans and the G. A. R. As these veterans of the civil war passed the waiting hearse wheeled into line, the guards of honor from the army and navy took up positions on either side of the hearse and the funeral cortege proper took its appointed place behind a delegation of the Grand Army of the Republic. Close behind the hearse came a carriage in which were seated ex-President Grover Cleveland, Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans and General John M. Wilson. In a carriage drawn by four black horses coming next were President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and Commander W. S. Cowles, the president's brother-in-law. Then followed a line of carriages bearing all the members of the cabinet, a number of ex-members and behind them the diplomatic corps. Solemnly the funeral party proceeded past the treasury building and into the broad sweep of Pennsylvania avenue amid profound silence that was awful to those who only six months ago had witnessed the enthusiastic plaudits which greeted the dead man as he made the same march to assume for the second time the honors and burdens of the presidential office.

The artillery band played a dirge as it led the way down the avenue. All the military organizations carried arms but with colors draped and furled. The crowds were silent, all was sad, mournful and impressive. The people stood with heads uncovered and many bowed as the hearse passed along, with a gentle rain falling.

After the carriages in which were diplomats, followed a long line of others containing the justices of the supreme court, the senate and house committees appointed to attend the funeral, the local judiciary, the assistant secretaries of the several departments, members of the various government commissions and official representatives of the insular governments. The remainder of the procession was composed of a large representation of local bodies of Knights Templars, over 1,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Confederate Veterans of the City of Washington and Alexandria, Va., the various religious and patriotic societies, including the Sons of the American Revolution, secret societies and labor organizations of the city. Scattered here and there at intervals were representatives of out of town organizations, including the Republican club of New York city, the New York Italian chamber of commerce and of the New York board of trade and transportation, the New York Democratic Honest Money league and the Southern Manufacturers club of Charlotte, N. C.

The military order of the Loyal Legion of which President McKinley was a member, with representation from the New York and Pennsylvania commanderies formed a conspicuous part in this portion of the procession, as did the Knights Templars of this city and of Alexandria, Va., and a battalion of the Uniformed Rank, K. of P.

The full force of letter carriers of Washington, each with a band of black crepe around his arm, walked to the solemn tread of the dirge. The banners of all organizations were furled and draped with black and all the marching civilians wore mourning badges and white gloves. Rifle and drum corps and bands rendered at frequent intervals along the route the president's favorite hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." The procession occupied one hour and a half in passing a given point.

For hours before the arrival of the funeral cortege at the east front of the capitol an impenetrable cordon of people had massed along the walk and areas fronting the plaza. Thousands upon thousands had gathered here to pay their last tribute of respect and love to the memory of the dead.

At 10:12 o'clock the head of the procession arrived at the north of the capitol plaza, but instead of swinging directly into the plaza and passing in front of the capitol as is usually done on the occasion of presidential inaugurations, the military contingent passed eastward on B street, thence south on First street east. Headed by Major General John R. Brooke and staff and the fifth artillery corps band, the troops swept around to the south end of the plaza and then marched to the positions fronting the main entrance to the capitol. As soon as they had been formed at rest, the artillery band on the left and the Marine band on the right of the entrance, the funeral cortege with its guard of honor entered the plaza from the north. As the hearse halted in front of the main staircase, the troops responding to almost whispered commands, presented arms. The guard of honor ascended the steps, the naval officers on the right and the army officers on the left, forming a cordon on each side. Just within the ranks of the artillerymen, again and marines. As the eight sturdy body-bearers, four from the army and four from the navy drew the flag-draped casket from the hearse the bands again played "Nearer My God to Thee." With careful and solemn tread the body-bearers began the ascent of the staircase with their precious burden and tenderly bore it to the catafalque.

PRaise AND PRAYER.

Sacred Offerings to Throne of Grace From Sorrow Stricken Hearts.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The funeral services at the capitol over the remains of the late President McKinley were simple and beautiful. The rites began at 10:55 and were of the form prescribed by the Methodist church. Two hymns, a prayer, an address and a benediction comprised it all.

The people were slow in gathering. Among the first comers were the army officers. General Randolph, chairman of artillery, and in charge of the military arrangements at the capitol, was first among those and soon afterwards came General Gillespie, chief of engineers, and General Fitzhugh Lee. Soon the number of officers became too great to distinguish between them and the rotunda began to light up with the flashes of gold lace and gut buttons and flashing sword scabbards scattered through the soberly dressed crowd of civilians. Before 10 o'clock the latter had assembled in such numbers as to fill the greater part of the seating space not reserved for the persons in the funeral procession who were to enter the rotunda.

Just at 10 o'clock Admiral Dewey made his appearance, accompanied by General Otis, General Davis and General Ruggles. He glanced over the scene within and then took up his station at the eastern entrance where he was joined by the other members of the guard of honor.

Mrs. Hobart with her son and Mrs. Russell A. Alger, escorted by Colonel Hecker, also entered during the time of waiting. The clergymen and the choir, the latter from the Metropolitan M. E. church, which Mr. McKinley attended, filed in and were seated at the head of the catafalque.

President Roosevelt entered at 10:50. He was accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and they were quickly followed by members of the house of representatives. Senator Frye, president pro tem, headed the senate and Speaker Henderson the house.

The cabinet, the diplomatic corps and the navy followed one another into the rotunda in rapid succession. Admiral Schley was among the naval officers present. They were followed by the White House corps and they in turn by the senate. After these came the supreme court.

To the strains of "Nearer My God to Thee" by the Marine band outside, the casket was borne into the rotunda, and every one arose. The guard of honor on the outside separated and the casket was placed gently upon the catafalque. Next came members of the family of the deceased, Abner McKinley leading, and were seated near the casket. Mrs. McKinley was not present. Senator Hanna was with the family party. Next the diplomatic corps entered, all in full court regalia and were seated to the south. Former President Cleveland with General Wilson, his escort, sat in the first row. President Roosevelt was given a seat at the end of the row occupied by the cabinet, just south of the casket. Mr. Roosevelt's face was set and he appeared to be restraining his emotions with difficulty. When the noise occasioned by seating the late comers had ceased, a hush fell upon the people and then the choir sang "Lead Kindly Light." Bishop Newman's divine anthem, while every one stood in reverence. The hymn was followed by prayer by the Rev. Dr. H. R. Naylor.

At the end of the prayer, the voices of the choir swelled forth and the rich pure notes of Mrs. Thomas C. Noyes led the hymn "Sometime We'll Understand." As soon as the hymn ceased Bishop Edward G. Andrews of the Methodist Episcopal church, who had come from Ohio to say the last words over the remains of his lifelong friend and parishoner, arose. He stood at the head of the casket and spoke in a sympathetic voice and with many evidences of deep emotion.

The address lasted only a quarter of an hour. After the bishop's address everyone in the vast rotunda arose and hundreds of voices joined the choir in the grand old hymn "Nearer My God to Thee." It was an affecting moment. In the midst of the singing, Admiral Robley D. Evans, advancing with silent tread, placed a beautiful blue floral tribute at the foot of the casket. The last notes died away softly and with uplifted hands, the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. W. M. Chapman, acting pastor of the Metropolitan church. This ended the religious service.

There was a pause for a few minutes while the ushers cleared the aisles and the assemblage began to withdraw. First to retire was President Roosevelt. The remainder retired in the order which they entered, the cabinet members following the president and after them the diplomatic corps, the supreme court, senators and representatives, officers of the army and navy and officials of less degree.

FINAL FAREWELL.

Placid Face of McKinley Seen the Last Time in Washington.

Washington, Sept. 17.—After the funeral services almost 20 minutes was required to clear the rotunda sufficiently to permit the opening of the doors for the admission of the general public. Most of the flowers were removed from the casket. The lid was lifted from over the face and at 11:53 the people began to file by, coming into the building at the east door and passing out through the west door. The people passed on both sides of the casket. No one was allowed more than a hurried glance.

The people came in double file, one line passing to the right and the other to the left of the casket. This was continued until the casket was closed at 6:30 o'clock. Whenever there was an attempt to linger, especially over the casket, as there was in many instances, the person making it was admonished by the capitol police to "pass on." In this way about 130 people were enabled to view the remains every minute. The crowd consisted of men, women and children, and all colors and ages were represented.

Many children were carried through the building in the arms of their parents. As the body of the dead president lay in state, it was guarded by representatives of all branches of the national martial service, and besides sentries at the head, foot and sides of the coffin, artillerymen, seamen and marines formed a lane through which the people passed.

According to the previously arranged program the remains were escorted from the capitol to the Pennsylvania depot by the same martial forces which acted as escort from the White House to the capitol, the funeral party boarded the special train and at 8 o'clock departed for Canton.

SERVICE AT CANTON.

Arrangements Made For Last Rites at McKinley's Home.

Canton, O., Sept. 17.—The funeral train upon its arrival at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning will be met by members of the executive committee and by the following honorary pallbearers selected by the family: John G. Dneber, George B. Frease, B. E. Cassidy, William R. Day, Joseph Biechle, Henry M. Harter, William A. Lynch and Thomas E. McCarty.

The Grand Army band, which has played at every convention at which President McKinley was nominated for any office, will head the escort, which will be Troop A of Cleveland.

After leaving the train, the remains will be escorted to the court house, where they will lie in state until 9 o'clock p. m. Wednesday. Promptly at that hour, the doors will be closed and the crowd shut out. The remains will then be borne to the hearse and under the escort of Canton post, G. A. R., of which President McKinley was a member, will be taken to the president's late residence, there to remain during Wednesday night.

The plans which remain until approved from Washington, are that the body shall be taken from the residence at a very early hour Thursday morning to the court house, there to lie in state until 2 o'clock, the hour set for the commencement of the services at the First Methodist church.

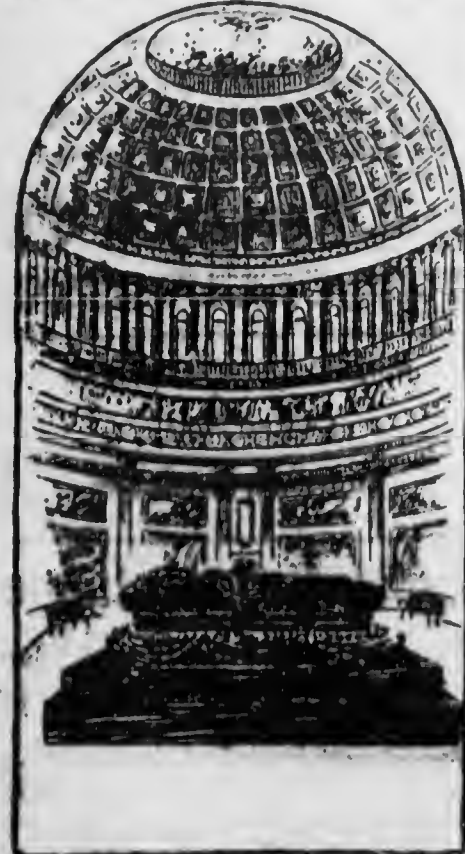

These services are not to be over 45 minutes in length and the only discourse will be made by the Rev. Dr. Manchester of Canton pastor of the First Methodist church. From the church the funeral cortege will proceed at once to Western cemetery, where the remains will be placed in the receiving vault.

Senator Foraker will not attend the president's funeral. He telegraphed Judge Day that because of his engagement to deliver the address at the memorial meeting to be held in Cincinnati Thursday, he would be unable to be present in Canton.

Examining the Bullets.

Buffalo, Sept. 17.—Dr. Hermann Matzinger is making a bacteriological analysis to determine whether the bullets fired from Czolgosz's revolver that ended the life of President McKinley were poisoned. He is being assisted by Dr. Henry R. Gaylord, of the state pathological laboratory and Herbert M. Hill, the city chemist who will make an examination of the bullets. Dr. Matzinger, when asked as to whether, in his opinion, the gangrenous affection was caused in the natural process of disease from the gunshot wound or whether it might be result of a poisoned bullet, said: "Really, I cannot say anything as to that at present. We are now making analysis of the affected tissue, but it will take some time to determine the results of our work. We shall not be able to talk until next week at any rate."

Mrs. John Turner of New Albany, Ind., has confessed that instead of her husband suiciding she killed him in self defense for attacking her while intoxicated. She is in jail.

CATAFALQUE IN CAPITOL ROTUNDA.

White House and later at the public services in the rotunda of the capitol. Many of the states sent their chief executives and part of their staffs. All branches of the national government, legislative, executive, judicial and military were represented. Senator Frye, president pro tem of the senate, arrived from Maine. With him was Chief Justice Fuller of the supreme court. David B. Henderson, the last speaker of the house of representatives attended as the representative of the lower house of congress, as well as the long time personal friend and associate of the dead man. Many others were present also of the legislative and judicial departments. Early the navy had its highest officers within reach of the city in attendance and all officers within the limits of the national capital took

KENTUCKY CROPS.

Recent Rains Have Increased the Danger to Tobacco From an Early Frost. Late Corn Has Improved.

[Weekly Bulletin of the Weather Bureau.]
 The temperature averaged a little above the normal; abundant rainfall occurred. These conditions were very favorable for plowing and sowing winter wheat and rye, but interfered somewhat with cutting and housing tobacco. Late corn has improved quite rapidly and looks very promising.

Tobacco cutting is well under way, but the late fields are kept in a growing condition by the rain; this will increase the yield, but also increases the danger from early frosts. Tobacco is about one-third cut and the outlook for the crop still continues to be favorable. Worms are reported to be very troublesome in some localities.

The rains have put the soil in good condition for plowing and the sowing of winter wheat is progressing nicely. The pea crop is being cut for hay and is giving a satisfactory yield. Pastures are in fine condition.

Peaches are abundant and apples show some improvement, but will be a short crop.

Sorghum is doing well and grinding is just beginning in some localities. Irish potatoes are very poor, but sweet potatoes quite good.

Heavy rains damaged crops in some localities in the western part of the State, but the area affected was small. Farm work is well up.

Mr. Turner Bramel who has been seriously ill at his home on Forest avenue was somewhat improved this morning.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50c. at J. Jas. Wood & Son's drug store.

Death's Shadow Darkens Another Home. Master Carleton Monroe Nesbitt, whose critical illness was mentioned in our last issue, died Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Nesbitt, of Forest avenue. He was taken sick only last Saturday evening, sinking into a critical condition Sunday evening from which he never rallied. His death is attributed to a malignant attack of scarlet fever. He was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Nesbitt, was four years and six months old, and was a bright child whose sudden death was a grievous shock to all, especially to his little playmates and to his bereaved parents. Their friends extend sincere sympathy to the stricken family. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 10:30 a. m. at the family residence, Rev. W. F. Taylor officiating. Burial in the Maysville Cemetery.

The Fleming Circuit Court is in session with four murder cases on the docket, as follows: Wm. J. Thacker, indicted for the murder of John Gordon at Mt. Carmel, July 20, 1900; James Page, indicted for the murder of Saunders Rawlings at King's Mill, October 19, 1900; Charles Gaskins, colored, charged with the murder of Jas. Ryan, May 3, last; Russell O. Hall, charged with the murder of James Markwell at Grange City, August 9 last. Gaskins has been in the Newport jail for safe-keeping, but will be brought back this week. This is the first time so many cases of this kind has been before the Fleming court at any one term.

John S. Keeves, former Presiding Elder of the Maysville District, M. E. Church, South, but who was deposed from the ministry and excluded from the church a few years ago, committed suicide Monday at his home in Winchester by taking morphine. He has been living in extreme poverty since his expulsion from the ministry. He leaves a young wife and baby, as well as several grown sons.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Christian Church will meet with Mrs. Harry Barkley this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Business of importance and all are urged to be present.

TABLE LINENS.

No, No! We did not buy all the linens in the New York Market, for we only bought the cream of the best. Such a grand showing of Table Linens has never before been made in Maysville. Ireland and Scotland are the homes of Linens across the waters, but the Bee Hive is the linen headquarters of Kentucky.

UNBLEACHED TABLECLOTHS, exceptionally big values; 25c., 29c., 39c. Our 45c. and 65c. qualities are seventy-two inches wide. Red Table Cloths from 19c. to 65c.

BLEACHED TABLE DAMASK, seventy-two inches wide; a variety of beautiful patterns, 49c., 59c., 65c., 69c., 79c., 89c., $1.25, $1.49c. yard. We have a big stock of match sets.

TOWELS.

Our Towels are aristocrats—none better made. Whether you buy our 5c. Cotton Towel or our 89c. Linen Towels you will get the best values that can possibly be made for this money.

SHEET and PILLOW CASE SETS,

Made of the best muslin and hemstitched. Beautiful is too mild an adjective to describe them. $2.49 to $3.98 a set.

ALBATROSS FLANNELS.

That's the name of a new line of Flannellettes we have just received. The patterns are exceptionally pretty and the qualities are fine. They are thirty-four inches wide and we say 19c. a yard instead of 25c. We have a few Persian patterns a little narrower at 17c. a yard.

A. F. C. GINGHAMS.

We consider ourselves fortunate in being able to secure some of these Gingham. They are very scarce. 9c. a yard. They make rather pretty shirts and shirtwaists.

A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly saved him. It's simply wonderful for burns, boils, piles and all skin eruptions. It's the world's champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25 cents. Sold by J. Jas. Wood & Son.

TOOK HIS LIFE.

Edward Stough Shot Himself at Covington Tuesday—To Be Buried Here This Afternoon.

Edward Stough, aged thirty-two, an engineer employed in the Covington yards of the C. and O. railway, and living at Fourteenth and Russell streets, Covington, committed suicide at noon Tuesday. He entered Houboken's saloon at Twelfth and Russell streets, Covington, bought a cigar and passed out of the rear entrance into the back yard.

In a moment a shot was heard, and the inmates rushing out found Stough weltering in his blood. A 38 caliber bullet had entered the left temple, passed through the brain and passed out under the right ear. Death was instantaneous.

The Coroner was notified and his body removed to his home. He leaves a wife and one child. Stough suffered a sunstroke during the recent heated spell and has since been acting strangely.

Mr. Stough's wife was a Miss Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roe Carr of the Sixth ward. His remains will be brought here on the 1:30 train this afternoon and laid to rest in the Maysville Cemetery at 5 o'clock.

Miss Phoebe Waller, of this city, is teaching the Longfellow school near Sardis.

This morning was the coldest of the season to date, the temperature dropping to 42°—the frost line. No frost, however, was noticeable.

Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night.
